

Biography

Biography
Biography
BIOGRAPHY

Sherry Thomas

Sherry Thomas is a Section Chief with the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction, Exceptional Children Division. Prior to taking this position, Sherry was the state Consultant for Learning Disabilities, ADHD/ADD and Rtl. She continues to serve as part of the NC Rtl Leadership Team, and is the Grant Manager for the Rtl Secondary Pilot Project, funded by The Oak Foundation. Prior to working at the state department, Sherry worked in a large school district in N.C. as technical support for elementary, middle and high schools, related services and low incidence populations. She has also held adjunct positions at the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, in the Department of Child Development and Special Education, and Mars Hill College, in the Department of Special Education, where she has taught both graduate and undergraduate courses in special education. Sherry received her bachelor's degree in special education, with a concentration in learning disabilities and mental disabilities from Sacred Heart College and a master's degree in special education, with a concentration in learning disabilities from The University of North Carolina - Charlotte. Her teaching experiences include over fifteen years in a multitude of educational settings.